Strategies for Human-Human Interaction

Jamika D. Burge
Mary Jane (Janie) Irwin
Patty Lopez
Our Plan for the Day

- Introduce ourselves
- Identify our most challenging human-human interactions
- Listen to your experiences and share strategies for managing these relationships
- Discuss final thoughts
What is your human-human interaction experience?

- FAMILY
- Course Professors
- Research Team
- Advisor
- New Contacts
- Acquaintances
- Student Colleagues
- Professional Colleagues
Now, it’s your turn!

• With a partner, describe the most constructive and least constructive interaction experience you have had this year so far
Some topics...

- Micro-aggressions and Hostility
- Conflict resolution
- Discrimination (Covert and Overt)
- Double-bind
- Harassment
- Being the “only” one
- Imposter syndrome
- Prove it again
- Walking the tightrope
- Two-body problem
- Family-friendly policies (or a lack of)
- Implicit bias
- Stereotype threat
What are your stories and/or thoughts?
You can do this!

• Good human-human interaction is a daily exercise
  ○ You will continue to learn how to be better at it!

• Don’t ignore your experiences
  ○ Learn from them, but know that you have everything inside to succeed!
Additional Resources

• Ms. Mentor's Impeccable Advice for Women in Academia, by Emily Toth
• Kidding Ourselves: Breadwinning, Babies, and Bargaining Power, by Rhona Mahoney
• Getting to Yes: Negotiating Agreement Without Giving In, by Roger Fisher and William Ury
• Nice Girls Don't Get the Corner Office, by Lois Frankel
• Women Don't Ask: Negotiation and the Gender Divide, by Linda Babcock and Sara Laschever
Scenario 1

At meetings, Peter and Sunil are increasingly disrespectful towards you and Jenny: they ignore you, interrupt you, and/or poach your ideas. Your advisor, doesn't seem to notice and in fact credits your and Jenny’s ideas to Peter and Sunil.
Scenario 2

Prof. Hat asks you to help out with the Graduate Recruiting Committee because 'they need a woman'. You end up doing a lot of this kind of department service and are wondering if it's worth the time and effort. But, should you/how can you say no?
Scenario 3

You are attending a conference and don’t know anyone well. There are few women in the conference.

- What should you do about lunch that is part of the conference?
- What should you do about dinner?